

I strongly object to the proposed regulatory changes regarding media cross-ownership. Any further concentration of ownership will serve to stifle a broad range of views and reporting which this country needs in the major media. Any politician or government employee who truly values their freedom, and the fundamental right to open and free discourse, will not allow the influence of a few large owners to guide the dissemination of information in our great nation. Those who seek to make these changes are deceptive at best, and also unpatriotic.
